Edmonton and is spending this week with Mrs. Stewart's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. McLaughlin.

The head office of the Tourist Association of Southwestern B. C. and Southern Alberta is to be removed to Medicine Hat, with Clarence Richardson as the Commissioner in charge.

E. Wallis and W. Campbell have returned home from their shooting trip.
Although they had good shooting, the weather was too mild to keep the game and they had to give most of it away.

There is evidently an outbreak of scarlet fever in the Medicine Hat schools. Every precaution is being taken by the Board and the teachers.

After the regular meeting of Quarry lodge next Tuesday evening, there will be a social gathering to which the members will bring their wives and lady friends. The social will commence at nine o'clock.

The little seven months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Winchell died suddenly yesterday morning. Death was so sudden that the cause is unknown.
Mr. and Mrs. Winchell had just returned from a holiday trip south.

The Ladies of St. Mary's Altar Society will hold an afternoon tea and sale of home cooking in Cliff hall, on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 14th, from 2:30 till 5 o'clock. There will also be hall in the evening commencing at 8 o'clock. Admission to evening entertainment 35c. All are invited to be present.

Why
is the sky blue?

—because the air is filled with tiny dust particles. These absorb the light rays which make color colors and reflect to the eye the rays which make blue.
The occasional use of

Puretest

makes the sky seem bluer above and brighter than the less "blue" within.

Easy to take because it is thoroughly purified. Cleanses the system—helps you keep fresh and fit. Especially good for olderly people and those of middle age.

Civilization In Ancient Egypt

Culture Flourished in Nile Valley
12,000 Years Ago
Twelve thousand years ago Egypt had a culture of its own, a culture in evidence of that to be found in many parts of the world today. This revelation is the substance of discoveries of the greatest historical importance made in the last few weeks during the late winter season by the two camps of the British School of Archaeology, which the famous correspondent of the London Morning Post.

Hitherto, when reference has been made to pre-historic culture, the period indicated has been somewhere between 5,000 and 6,000 B.C. But 12,000 years even before that remote age man had worked down from the Caucasus, through Sinai, settled in Egypt and had advanced far beyond the primitive state. He had developed a social instinct; he had organized his towns and cities; and he had been taken through successive intellectual stages until he had reached the high sense of the beautiful. Twelve thousand years ago it had been born and was flourishing in the northern district of the Nile Valley.

This discovery sheds light on the inhabited world of 120 centuries ago. It has long been known that numerous centuries before the latest pre-historic period Europe was inhabited by human beings. But such evidence of their material culture has been secured has indicated that they existed in fairly primitive style. They apparently attempted to make tools and create, but their efforts appear to have been the untrained gropings of the instinctive human mind. The result of this discovery, their inspiration and their work becomes more comprehensive.

It seems as if Egypt in those early times had imbibed this spirit and the delivery of the Sphoerian culture, and it was this that led to the development of the Egyptian culture. Situated even then at the gateway of the peoples of the world, the Egyptian mind was the result of this discovery, their inspiration and their work becomes more comprehensive.

Dangerous Farm Wells

Location of the Well Is Often a Menace to Health

The Dominion Chemist, in his annual report again calls attention to the precautions that should be taken in establishing a farm well. For more than thirty years, the Division of Chemistry of the Experimental Farms, over which Mr. P. T. Shutt presides, has been warning farmers of the dangers of wells with respect to their health. Dr. Shutt points out that there are not only dangerous wells, but also dangerous farmers who do not realize the gravity of the question. By the contamination of the water they express the belief that more and more the farming community will be brought to understand more completely the bearing that the quality of the water supply has on the health of the family or on the health and thrift of the livestock.

The chief fault in the present condition of affairs, he states, is found in the location of the well. Too often safety has been sacrificed for convenience. Wells are being drilled in places where water may carry dangerous contamination. Where an analysis confirms the suspicion that the well is receiving the drainage of a dangerous channel, the Dominion Chemist recommends drilling on a level at least fifty yards from a possible source of contamination. As it is assumed that only superficial or surface water is drawn, the results of the tests made by the Dominion Chemist do not represent the results of the water in the well. During the year of which the report is made, but 17 per cent of the samples of water were pure. The remaining 83 per cent were either polluted or in danger of being polluted. How Japs Play Baseball

Could Teach American Fans Lessons in Sportsmanlike Behaviour

The Japanese love baseball with an undying affection. A crowd of 5,000 spectators is a common occurrence, and frequently 7,000 to 8,000 people cover the sides of the natural amphitheatre in Yokohama where the ball-players perform. The Japanese play the game conservatively; they dislike taking long chances and shun wild base-running. One of the fastest outfielders in Japan, Tetsugao, who formerly played the game in America, has a tendency toward risky base-stealing and consequently is best safely on the bench where his example will not upset his mates.

As a rule the fans are intensely loyal, and they could teach American crowds a few lessons in sportsmanlike behaviour. They look upon the "base" as something that isn't down. The Japanese are considerate of the feelings of others and to "raise" a player would be unpardonable. For the most part a crowd of Japanese spectators maintain a funeral silence, but it will burst into a salvo of applause without rhyme or reason. Sometimes a player receives a crushing blow and his supporters afterwards make a noise of groaning and wailing. A long foul ball will be greeted with a cheer, but a foul ball will be greeted with a cheer, but a foul ball will be greeted with a cheer.

Benin To Study Traffic Problems

Experts Will Investigate Methods of London, Paris and New York

Street traffic in Benin has increased to such an extent within the last few months, chiefly due to the larger number of automobiles now in use, that the city authorities have sent experts to study the ways of handling traffic in other cities. New York and other American cities will be studied by the Benin officials, as will London and Paris. It is planned to establish a signal system of some kind at the most congested street intersections.

In Potsdam, France, Benin's busiest corner, where five streets intersect, it is planned to establish a signal system of some kind at the most congested street intersections. Canada's Great Resources

Dominion Stands Third Amongst Countries of the World

The need of developing to the full the possibilities of the natural resources of Canada was emphasized by Arthur L. Hatch, of Hamilton, President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, at the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Day luncheon of the Ottawa Club. Colonel Hatch pointed out that Canada stood third amongst the countries of the world in natural resources.

It possesses half of the forest area of the British Empire. Canada contained 30 per cent of the cobalt of the world, 90 per cent of the asbestos, 95 per cent of the nickel, 4 per cent of the gold of the world to be discovered and 1 per cent of the copper of the world to be discovered. The mines produced in 1923, $14,000,000 worth of gold, silver and 175 million dollars' worth of other minerals. There was an increase this year of 20 per cent over last year. The total value of the minerals produced in 1923 was $14,000,000. The total value of the minerals produced in 1923 was $14,000,000.

Keep A Cheerful Disposition

We Should Spread Abroad Every Ray Of Sunshine We Can Capture

"The most beautiful sign of wisdom is a cheerful disposition," writes Montaigne, that acute observer of man and manner, and many another great mind has reached the same conclusion, though perhaps by other routes. It is pretty generally admitted that a cheerful disposition is a necessary capacity to a serious effort. Not only are a world's outlook and a disheartened disposition fatal to one's own chances of either real happiness or great success, but they are greatly unfair to other people.

Once into the main street, Seymour found a semblance of permanency in the town. The establishments of the retail trading companies were built of logs and surprisingly fronted by glass windows. The one he went to the second. Seymour noted also a restaurant, a chop house, a good hall, several "soft" drink emporiums—all of French bistro character.

A shock of straw, topped with cedar shakes, crooked beside the hotel and offered the sign.

OFFICE OF SHERIFF

GOLD BRANCH
OFFICE OF CORONER

Erstwhile it was from the door of this Deputy Coroner Harley had sent the inspector out on his fair ride.

Near this shack stood the temporary post office which, directed a streamer with the records of the mining recorder. The first bank of gold occupied a tent with a wood floor. For the reconstruction of the town, the information of all, this tent was a banner on which the word "gold" was written.

The palatial permanent home of the coroner stood in the "strange" place. A structure of corrugated iron, awning a roof.

Gold, at this season of the year, was a right town, so the town of gold was practically deserted as the small procession of the population was at work up the creek. There was something of an outburst into King Street at the news of the shooting spree.

Some fifty men and a scattering of women gathered to snail about the freight wagon soon to be taken from the hall before Harley's shack. From the vantage of his saddle seat, Seymour studied their faces as they received the news, but caught no trace of any emotion. He heard as they expressed great shock; however, none so deeply moved as he. He saw the express rider carry such a drastic blow so severely.

Deputy Harley consulted with Inspector Stanley before he stepped from the door by the nearest his stirrup as the back man, who was on duty, he said the principal reason. Presently the deputy shifted an announcement that in his capacity as coroner, he would award a jury and hold an inquest at an earlier hour than the elected bank building.

The freight wagon's lumber drawn covered with tarpaulin, was drawn to a position at the rear of the undisturbed structure. The crowd of men who were working was laying a heavy footing for a vault, the men were their curiosity satisfied; turned to disperse about their various errands.

In turning back to the town, Seymour came face to face with Ruth Baymore, who, evidently, had just reached town and at speed, for her mount was puffing. The girl's element was high in the girl's cheeks. She was smiling at him, but from the young man's eyes, within the hour, had been so solicitous of his welfare as to keep him from entering the brush in search of the murderer. Her eyes did not avoid him; they simply did not show him.

Not avoiding him; they simply did not show him. Having administered this gaze, he turned direct, as he focused on the gallant figure of the man who rode alongside him, his hand on his face with a look of admiration.

"What has happened?" Seymour heard her ask. "Your darling expression of—of that face," he said, "is a masterpiece of art."

"Terrible! I must say you don't seem nearly distressed, Mr. Baymore, and I'll thank you not to correct me, and the poor man by saying my friend."

"You've been seeing so much of this first person, Ruth, you have had so much of your old friends. Of course, I'm sorry for the man who has been out of the running, but—"

"That's what you small credit. Do you suppose?" "Harley's," he said, "hasn't decided yet." Seymour caught the flicker of contempt in the freighter's eyes. "Better come and have dinner with me at the hotel; this isn't our tragedy."

Her displeasure seemed increased, and she gathered her reins. "I wouldn't think of it," she said with decision. "I must carry the dreadful news to uncle."

"I must carry the dreadful news to uncle," she said with decision. "I must carry the dreadful news to uncle."

"Some advice, but why?" murmured Seymour. "There were several who thought that the sergeant found it necessary to consider."

"Why had he cut him at the second meeting? Why had he seemed so angry?" "It happened," he said. "He could only hope that he had a chance to see the man who had been more free to work out a solution of the mystery as to who had killed him."

It was evident from Seymour's complaining attitude that the impostor should, until he could be taken down to arouse the handsome freighter's jealousy. And he was not far from it.

French Have Scheme To Detect Criminals

Dust On Clothing Of Suspects Is Carefully Examined

Careful examination of the dirt and dust upon the clothing of suspects is a new scheme of the French police to catch criminals.

After cross-examination the suspects are stripped of their clothing, whose superficial dirt is first examined under a strong microscope.

A vacuum cleaner is next applied to draw out other dust into a pan.

In some instances a more thorough process, in which linting figures, is used to separate all particles of foreign matter. From the dirt thus secured the detective determines whether the suspect has been telling the truth.

One murderer tried to prove an alibi by saying that he had slept in an open field the night of the crime. Microscopic examination of his clothing showed that he had slept in a quarry.

An unsuspected carpenter was connected with a murder by means of sawdust found on a place of crime, which the victim had taken from his sawmill and which was found at the scene of the crime.

The chief value of the new plan has been in breaking down the bravado of the criminal. They frequently confess when shown that their story were lies.

The process of Nature cannot be stopped, but only help in one place at the expense of another, a "renewal" of "in one particular spot" the progress is barred by breakers.
